

The SB7 Framework from the book "Building A Story Brand" by Donald Miller consists of seven key elements designed to clarify your brand message. Here's how you can apply the SB7 framework to your "Sip Studies - Roadmap":

Character: Your Customer

Who is the main character in your story? This is your ideal customer.

For Sip Studies, your character could be anyone interested in beverage education, including wine enthusiasts, coffee lovers, and those who are passionate about beverages and water accessibility.

Problem: Their Problem

What problem is your customer facing?

The problems might include the need for reliable information on beverages, access to clean water, or the desire for a community to share their interests.

Guide: Your Brand

How does your brand position itself as a guide to help solve their problem?

Sip Studies can position itself as an expert guide in beverage education and an advocate for water accessibility, providing high-quality products, services, and educational content.

Plan: The Plan

What plan do you offer to help your customer solve their problem?

The plan could involve joining Sip Studies for educational programs, participating in charitable activities to promote water accessibility, or using AI tools for personalized beverage recommendations.

Call to Action: Your Call to Action

What clear and compelling call to action do you offer to move your customer to act?

This could be signing up for a membership, subscribing to a newsletter, joining a course, or donating to a water charity.

Avoid Failure: The Stakes

What will happen if your customer doesn't take action?

The customer might miss out on valuable knowledge about beverages, lack a community to share their interests, or fail to contribute to solving the global water crisis.

Success: The Transformation

What does success look like for your customer?

Success could mean being well-educated about beverages, being part of a supportive community, and contributing to meaningful change through water accessibility initiatives.

SB7 Framework for Sip Studies:

Character: Beverage enthusiasts seeking education and community.

Problem:

- External: Lack of reliable beverage information.
- Internal: Desire for deeper knowledge and connection.
- Philosophical: Everyone should have access to clean water and quality beverages.

Guide: Sip Studies, with expertise in beverages and a mission to improve water accessibility.

Plan:

- Join educational programs.
- Participate in charitable activities.
- Use AI tools for personalized recommendations.

Call to Action: Sign up, subscribe, join, or donate.

Avoid Failure: Missing out on knowledge, community, and impactful contributions.

Success: Well-educated about beverages, part of a community, contributing to global water solutions.

Example Hero Section:

"Join Sip Studies to expand your beverage knowledge, connect with a community, and support global water accessibility."

Sitemap for Sip Studies:

Homepage

Hero Section with Mission Statement

About Us

Featured Programs

Call to Action

Testimonials

Charitable Activities

Footer with Contact Info and Social Media Links

About Us

Our Mission

Our Team

Our Story

Programs

Wine Education

Coffee Courses

Spirits Classes

Tea Workshops

Charity

Water Accessibility Initiatives

How to Get Involved

Success Stories

Resources

Blog

FAQs

Articles and Guides

Membership

Membership Benefits

Pricing Plans

Sign Up

Contact

Contact Form

Location and Hours

Social Media Links

Shop

Educational Materials

Merchandise

Gift Cards